FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question:

Is a floating structure or houseboat required to be titled and registered?

Houseboats or floating structures are not normally required to be titled or registered. According to section 327.02, Florida Statutes, the definitions for both preclude the use of the vessel as a means of transportation. However, if a houseboat is ever used as a means of transportation on the waters; it must be titled and registered. A floating structure is allowed incidental movement on the water, but must also be titled and registered if the structure is ever used as a means of transportation on the waters or is used to move things (such as dirt, etc.) from place to place.

The definitions for a houseboat and floating structure are located in:

Section 327.02(10), Florida Statutes, defines floating structure as a floating entity, with or without accommodations built thereon, which is not primarily used as a means of transportation on water but which serves purposes or provides services typically associated with a structure or other improvement to real property. The term "floating structure" includes, but is not limited to, each entity used as a residence, place of business or office with public access, hotel or motel, restaurant or lounge, clubhouse, meeting facility, storage or parking facility, mining platform, dredge, dragline, or similar facility or entity represented as such. Floating structures are expressly excluded from the definition of the term "vessel" provided in this section. Incidental movement upon water or resting partially or entirely on the bottom shall not, in and of itself, preclude an entity from classification as a floating structure.

Section 327.02(13), Florida Statutes, Houseboat means any vessel which is used primarily as a residence for a minimum of 21 days during any 30-day period, in a county of this state, and this residential use of the vessel is to the preclusion of the use of the vessel as a means of transportation on water.
